GINKO

HSU

Ginko Hsu is a Helsinki-based sculptor and interdisciplinary artist. Her work moves between memory and myth, exploring forms of personal and collective memory that exist outside established archives.

She is currently developing Olla ei mistään kotoisin(Of No Origin), a research-based zine and exhibition series on absence and illegibility as portals for alternative knowledge systems, supported by the Kone Foundation.

She works across mediums, including publication, images, glass, ceramics, textiles, moving images, found objects, poems, ritual gestures and interactive installations. Her practice embraces materials rich with contraction and hybridity: glass and ceramics that fracture yet endure, textiles that whisper both domestic and transcultural narrations, words that knots past to present.

Three Yakushi-do Halls, Awara-Yunomachi, Japan

The three Yakushi-do halls in Awara Onsen, Fukui, long functioning as important community gathering spaces, hosted an exhibition presenting selected pages from my publication OEMK Vol.0: Elephant Tale.

Through themes of spirituality, collective memory, myth, and power hierarchies, the work engages with the layered histories and everyday presence of these communal religious spaces. Installed across windows and entrance areas, the exhibition extends the publication into the architecture and daily life of the neighbourhood.

An open studio event with installation showcasing the ongoing inquiry Olla ei mistään kotoisin (Of No Origin), reflecting on habitats and their fragile, shifting conditions.

Developed in collaboration with local architect Toshinori Oka, the installation brings together fragments of photographic imagery, negative space, oral histories, shared food and flowers, tombo-dama glass beads and found objects. These elements are organised through a segmented structure inspired by a child's kimono composition discovered in an akiya (vacant house).

As the participants gradually take away the food and flowers, photos and stories of past memories begin to reveal themselves.

Project/ONCE IN A WHILE

The installations transform traces of the past into tangible forms—sculptures, soundwork of poetry, anticipatory rituals—inviting viewers to engage with the body, objects, and spaces as sites of remembrance and reflection. The series addresses how to access fragmented memories, across feminist, queer and postcolonial frameworks.

Through these works, I explore the legacies of migration, trauma, and cultural memory, while giving form to stories that cannot be fully spoken, allowing absence and loss to inhabit space and matter.

Project/SURROUNDED BY

This body of sculpture works look into the surroundings, and ponder on belongingness. Through the process, I constantly ask myself what it means to be a female, Asian, queer artist in my adulthood in Finland. I think about the social system, about eco-feminism, and about my identity.

The project includes a short film and installation.

Inspired by an ancient fictional story written by Pu Songling, the artist imagined a post-apocalyptic land, where the protagonist encounters a group of non-human beings. Through a loose narrative of self-discovery, where the signification of societal norms is examined. The almost detached monotone speaks on the blurred line between humans and nonhumans, reality and phantom.
